"The Moros were brought to the southern part of the Philippines by Kabung Suwan practically by force. They have among them many positive characters, but their attitude towards the American, and in fact any member of a white race, is that of toleration, as though it is our turn now, but theirs will come. They seem to believe that the Americans will leave, as did the Spaniards, and give up trying to impart any notion of civilization to them. The women of the Moros are like the eastern Mohammedan women, avoiding men, and covering up their features in the presence of men. Excelsior camp held an open meeting last Thursday afternoon. The regular division meeting will be held on Thursday, December 9, when the election of officers crowton, Gilbert Savage, Robert Stevenson and Harry A. James rendered vocal solos. Harry Allen and G. S. Farrell were the musicians. Neighbor Allen composed a beautiful march which he has named "Excelsior Camp" march, and which is dedicated to the Hon. A. R. Talbot (head consul.) Mr. Allen played the piece for the camp and was heartily applauded. Upon motion of the camp the march was strong enough for the work demanded of it.

the Moros of Mindanao. Chaplain Axton interspersed his remarks with numerous anecdotes and legends of the Moros, and began his lecture with a brief description of the Filipinos in the northern part of the islands.

Practically all of the natives of the northern part of the Philippines are Roman Catholics, according to Chaplain Axton, and he ascribes the present good conditions among them to the untiring efforts of Bishop Hartley, the coordingly, Datoe Ansig gave his consent, and ordered the sacrifice of a young boy. The boy was tied to a tree, holding a spear to his breast with his own hands and the two women then threw their weight on the spear, killing him almost instantly. A feast followed, and the body of the boy was set afire, and good conditions among them to the untiring efforts of Bishop Hartley, the
